location
A measure of location is single value that describes a data set or probability distribution. Typically this is an average value of the distribution, most commonly the mean. See also: median, mode, expectation.